Thirty-second Sunday of the Year 6 November 2022

Jesus saíd [to Sadducees, those who say that there is no resurrection]:

"The children of this world take wives and husbands, but those who are judged worthy of a place in the other world and in the resurrection from the dead do not marry because they can no longer die, for they are the same as the angels, and being children of the resurrection, they are sons and daughters of God."

(Luke 20:34-36)

On Monday morning, we welcome a new statue to St John's, a Seated Sacred Heart, sculpted by the renowned Scottish sculptor, Hew Lorimer (see above – and the handout) – while next week we will give more details of a striking Crucifixion by the equally renowned Scottish painter, Peter Howson, whoch has been offered on loan to St Mary Magdalene's.

This Monday afternoon, our monthly Healing Mass – with the sacrament of the sick - will take place at 2.30pm in St John's.

NOVEMBER MEMORIAL MASSES - our two November MEMORIAL MASSES will take place this week, on Thursday 10 November at 7pm at St Mary Magdalene's, and next week on Monday 14 November at St John's, also at 7pm. These are gentle and beautiful candlelit Masses in which we remember our dead - and have the opportunity to light a candle for them. Forms are now available from the back of both churches for you to complete with the names of those you would like remembered and read out. (To ensure the Masses don't take too long the suggestion is that we limit to 6 names – the last of which might be – 'the Deceased Members and Relatives of the ______family'). The completed forms should be placed in the boxes provided. Alternatively, please email the same information to Chris Jones, who is kindly collating the lists - chrisjones442@hotmail.com

Next Sunday is the annual World Day of Prayer for the Poor, initiated by Pope Francis.

Gena & Tom Gallagher, Alice Codling & Frances McDevitt, who were all presented with diocesan medals by Archbishop Leo last Sunday morning, would like to thank parishioners from both our parishes for their good wishes and prayers. They would also like to thank Fr Jock, Deacon Eddie, the welcomers, the music group, the sacristan and altar servers along with the cleaning, flower, live-streaming and hospitality teams for all they did to make Sunday morning such a very special and memorable occasion.

NOTICEBOARD

CLIMATE CHANGE – a message from SCIAF

It's time to take to the streets of Edinburgh!

A message from Penelope Blackwell, SCIAF Director of Public Engagement: "Join Stop Climate Chaos Scotland (SCCS) on the Global Day of Action in marching for climate justice. SCCS is a coalition of civil society organisations - of which SCIAF is a member - campaigning together on climate change. All are welcome to march with SCCS - Saturday 12 November, 12:00PM, Saint Andrew Square. SCCS's message is clear – Governments need to:

Act on the national and global cost of living crisis

Demand climate reparations

End the threat to nature and biodiversity

Stop fossil fuel extraction

Build a workers-led just and green transition.

Stand in solidarity with the communities worst affected by the climate crisis on the Global Day of Action.

Together, we can build the just and green world that we long to see. Thank you and God Bless".

Updates from Legion of Mary

'The October Charity Coffee Morning raised £330 for Mary's Meals. This was due to the generosity of those who donated. Mary's Meals have a "double the love" appeal, which means that our donations will be doubled. Many thanks to those who came along and gave happily to feed hungry children in schools. The November Coffee Morning will be held on Monday 14th in St John's Parish Hall after the 10am Mass. At the request of a parishioner, the donations will be given to "Smile Train" (please see https://www.smiletrain.org.uk), which provides operations for children, who are born with a cleft, which prevents babies from eating, drinking, hearing, speaking and smiling properly. Please come along and enjoy good company and home-baking.'

The day praying the Rosary for Peace on Monday 31st October resulted in 45 sets of Mysteries of the Rosary being said from 11am to 6pm. Those who took part were happy to pray for such a good cause. Many thanks to those who came along.

A special mention must be given to May Thomson, who joined in by saying the Rosary in her Nursing Home.'

'SAINT' OF THE WEEK I

Little Sister Magdeleine of Jesus (1898-1989) Foundress of the Little Sister of Jesus – Feast Day: 6 November

"As you work, as you come and go, as you pass among the crowds, to be a contemplative will mean simply that you try to turn to Jesus within you and enter into conversation with him, as with the one you love most in the world."

While growing up in France, Madeleine Hutin felt a powerful devotion to Jesus, but she could find no religious congregation that reflected her sense of vocation. Then, in her twenties, she happened upon a biography of Charles de Foucauld, the French explorer, priest, and finally desert father who died in North Africa in 1916.

Foucauld had envisioned a new kind of contemplative life, rooted in the world of the poor and based on the "hidden years" that Jesus spent as a carpenter in Nazareth. In his hermitage in the Sahara, he had conceived of a "fraternity" of men and women who would live among their Muslim neighbours as brothers and sisters, embracing poverty, manual labour, and a spirit of prayer. Thus, they would proclaim the gospel, not with their words, "but with their lives." For many years Foucauld had patiently prepared the way for followers who never came. In the end he died alone, his message bequeathed to the appreciation of a later generation. Decades later, it was discovered, among others, by Madeleine Hutin. Upon reading his biography she determined immediately to adopt Foucauld as her spiritual guide and to make his vision her own.

Because of poor health and family obligations, Hutin was not able to make a beginning until 1936 when, at the age of thirty-eight, she finally set sail for Algiers. She embarked with few if any plans, determined to trust herself entirely to providence. Soon she was introduced to Father René Voillaume, who had been converted by the same biography of Foucauld and whose Little Brothers of Jesus had been living in the desert since 1933. When she had confided to him her sense of vocation he responded with encouragement as well as invaluable assistance in obtaining the support of local church authorities. In 1939 the new congregation, the Little Sisters of Jesus, was finally established under the leadership of Little Sister Magdeleine, as she was henceforth known.

The word "Little" had special meaning for Magdeleine. During the early years of her vocation, she had experienced a number of intense visions inspired by her meditations on the Infant Jesus. The humility, weakness, and vulnerability of a baby were the disguises under which the world's saviour first appeared. And it seemed appropriate to her that this baby should also be the inspiration and model for those who wished to bear witness to divine love among the poorest and most powerless of the world.

It was years before the congregation was fully recognized by Rome. Along the way it was necessary to overcome many doubts and criticisms arising from the originality of Magdeleine's vision. Her Little Sisters were neither enclosed contemplatives nor were they engaged in traditional apostolic activities. They lived in small "fraternities," some consisting of no more than a couple of Sisters. While maintaining an intense commitment to contemplative prayer, they endeavoured to enter fully into the life and culture of their poor neighbours. Among other things this meant supporting themselves by common labour. Instead of a traditional habit, they wore a simple denim habit adorned with a cross. What was essential to the Little Sisters was that wherever they lived they should find themselves among the very poor. As for misunderstandings, she noted that "the world looks for efficiency more than for the unobtrusiveness of the hidden life." Thus, "Bethlehem and Nazareth will always remain a mystery to it."

In the beginning, basing her vision on the literal model of Brother Charles, Magdeleine had conceived of the mission of the Little Sisters exclusively in relation to the Muslims of North Africa. It was there that the congregation took root and flourished. But gradually Magdeleine enlarged her vision to conceive of a universal mission. Hence the fraternities spread throughout the world, attracting women of all races and nationalities.

By the time of her death there were 280 fraternities with 1,400 Little Sisters from 64 different countries. These included Little Sisters who travelled with gypsy caravans in Europe, who lived with nomadic circus troupes, and who even volunteered as prisoners. There were communities among the pygmies of Cameroon, in remote Eskimo villages in Alaska, among boat people in Southeast Asia, and in the slums of London, Beirut, and Washington, D.C. In her later life Magdeleine felt a special call to bear witness in the communist countries of the Eastern bloc. Driving in a converted minivan, she made dozens of trips throughout Eastern Europe, including eighteen trips to Russia. Quietly she was able to establish fraternities in a number of these countries. Whatever the setting, the aim of the Little Sisters was not to evangelize in a formal sense but to serve modestly as a kind of leaven in the midst of the world, imparting a spirit of love.

In 1949 Little Sister Magdeleine formally relinquished leadership of the congregation. She preferred to play an informal role as mother to her Sisters, traveling constantly around the globe rather than confining herself to the administration of a growing congregation. Although she had been sickly in her youth, she remained remarkably robust into her old age, continuing to do manual labour well into her eighties and undertaking her final exhausting trip to the Soviet Union at the age of ninety-one. She died later that year on November 6, 1989.

On 13 October 2021 Pope Francis named her as Venerable (the first of three stages in the canonisation process – of which beatification and canonisation are the second and third).

'SAINTS' OF THE WEEK II Kristallnacht [Crystal Night] Martyrs (9 November 1938)

"I would like to say that I would not like to be a Jew in Germany now." - Reichsmarshall Hermann Göring

A damaged lintel above a Torah ark from a synagogue that was destroyed during Crystal Night

Before the Nazis implemented their plan to exterminate the Jewish people, they advertised their intentions through a number of public spectacles. The most dramatic of these occurred on the night of November 9, 1938, when Nazi storm troopers throughout Germany mounted a terrible, coordinated assault on the Jewish community. One hundred and ninety-one synagogues were burned to the ground. Seventy-five hundred Jewish-owned shops were destroyed. Because of the shattered windows the pogrom became known as the Kristallnacht, or Crystal Night. In addition, twenty thousand Jewish men were arrested and placed in "protective custody," with half of them shipped to the Buchenwald concentration camp. Nearly one hundred Jews were killed.

The following day there was little protest, either in Germany or abroad. Notes from a meeting of the top-ranking Nazi officials indicate that they considered the night's activities a tremendous success.

Justice & Peace Charity Concert 30 November,

7.00pm at St John's Church

An evening of joy and hope! Come into the warmth and enjoy the delightful St John's Primary School Choir, Paul Tansey, 'A Scottish Folk Set' and other talented musicians perform on St Andrew's Night. The concert is free but there will be an opportunity to donate towards two vital causes – the Disasters Emergencies Committee appeal for the flood victims in Pakistan and also our local Food Bank at Wilson Memorial Church. There will also be a raffle on the night. (Free light refreshments at the interval.) Further details will be in next week's newsletter.

Every day is a messenger of God.

Love, Loss & Dating

Saturday 3 December, 7.30pm, Duddingston Kirk Hall

Jeremy Thorp, leader of the St John's Sunday Mass music group. writes: "Following their successful run in the Edinburgh Fringe this year, Jeremy (piano), with his friends Malcolm (vocals) and Nick (guitar) are presenting a one-off performance in aid of Dr Neil's Garden at Duddingston Village.

Malcolm and Jeremy have both lost their partners in recent years, and this jazz cabaret pays tribute to their lost loved ones whilst also celebrating their gradual recovery, coming to terms with their losses and meeting new partners.

Tickets £10 from Eventbrite, or from Jeremy on 07900 278043. Thank you".

Special offers from the Justice & Peace Group!

'Now that Halloween is past, our thoughts turn naturally to Christmas (or maybe not!) and to what special gifts we can give to our loved ones. To take some of the strain off the thinking process, here are two special offers which will bring pleasure both to the givers and receivers but also, importantly, will help to improve the quality of life of some of the less fortunate in our world.'

Bethany Christian Trust - "Buy-a-Bed"

Will you help someone who is homeless today? Are you wanting to buy ethical gifts this Christmas? Through Buy a Bed, giving a £21 gift this Christmas can help to cover the cost of a night's stay at the Rapid Reaccommodation Welcome Centre. This includes a warm and safe private en-suite room to sleep in, 24-hour care and support from professional and loving staff, three meals a day (one of which is a freshly prepared, hot, two-course dinner), a range of on-site support such as dental nurses and mental health practitioners, and tailored support to help individuals move rapidly out of the crisis of homelessness.

Buy at bethanychristiantrust.com/campaigns or via any member of the J&P Group

Each gift could mean the difference between someone having to sleep rough or having somewhere safe to stay and receive support.

With every Buy A Bed donated, you can also receive this beautiful card to gift to your loved one to show them just what their gift is doing.

SCIAF Real Gifts

A brilliant way to give a gift that makes a real difference for people living in some of the world's poorest places. When you buy a Real Gift for a loved one, you are providing something vital to our brothers and sisters in Africa, Asia, Latin America, the Middle East and Europe and also giving a thoughtful gift to someone in your life. SCIAF will send you a beautiful card for each gift you buy' to send on to the lucky recipient. Each card explains how their gift helps someone in need.

Buy at SCIAF.org.uk/realgifts. Alternatively, the J&P Group will have Real Gifts on sale around the beginning of December.

A REFLECTION ON THE GOSPEL FOR THE 32ND SUNDAY OF THE YEAR

Luke 20: 27-38

(The author of this reflection is a friend of Fr Jock who lives in Northumberland)

The BBC Sitcom classic 'Dad's Army' has, as one of its central characters, Corporal Jones. By day he is the village butcher, by evening an essential of the Home Guard platoon of Warmington-on-Sea. His catch phrase is: 'Don't Panic! Don't Panic! Don't panic, Captain Mainwaring', as he proceeds to run around in a state of total panic. The thing about panic is that it is highly contagious. Captain Mainwaring steps in, quickly restoring order and calm. He invariably turns to Sergeant Wilson, his second in command reminding him of the importance and effectiveness of a cool and level head.

The shopping mall is crowded. Christmas shopping is in full spate and though money is tight you're determined to try to make this Christmas as enjoyable as you can. An admonition: 'Make sure you hold onto my hand, and don't let go'. You're at the till and need to put down the carrier to free up both hands for payment. That was all it took. Transaction finished you turned, and she was gone. Panic! Fear! Which comes first? A tiny voice is urging you to remain calm, your primal urge is forcing a scream. Your brain is being scrambled by fear. Without realising it you are experiencing the emptiness that accompanies the absence of love. You need someone with a level head to come to your aid. Stay calm! Stay calm!

Today's Gospel sees entry, stage right, the Sadducees. They did not believe in the Resurrection, and they seek to trick Jesus. Everyone is listening closely. They're clever, they can play with emotions. The doctrine of bodily resurrection is difficult enough to comprehend without their intellectual point-scoring. They're trying to pick holes; they merely seek to sow discord and disharmony. The last thing they want is for Jesus' teaching to gain traction. Some will have been swayed by their argument just as some are swayed by the hysterical rantings of the modern-day anti-immigration lobby. Where they want us to panic and run around blindly, achieving nothing of usefulness, the voice of calm is called for. Enter Jesus, stage left. He does not rant at the Sadducees. He is calm, he is measured, he is clear. He speaks of God as God, not of the dead, but of the living. We live, long after this mortal coil has slipped into terminal decline, we live. The mystery of love transcends death. Jesus gives them his reply. He speaks of our individual immortality. Our relationships on this earth are important because they teach us about ourselves, and what it means to love. They teach us the skill of selflessness; they teach us that life is about giving. They teach us that loss of this life is but a step along the road to eternal life.

We cannot imagine an eternal life that does not involve the relationships we have enjoyed in this life here. To limit eternal life to nothing more than a copy of life here is to miss the point of the mystery that we are each made in the image and likeness of God - the God of infinite love and knowledge and understanding. This time of year, is a good time to reflect on our destiny - but we do so without fear for we believe in the God of the living, the God of love and the limitless opportunity that lies ahead and in this we rejoice.

I take a close interest in politics. I consider it a duty to ensure the words of the Gospel are heard amidst the clamour, mayhem and panic that pervades much of public life. As I listen to the hysteria, I seek the reassurance of Jesus and his teaching. I know what he wants me to say on the Rwanda policy. The only voice he has is ours. When we are confronted with a situation where panic runs amok, we need a Captain Mainwaring. When our six-year-old child becomes separated in a crowded shopping mall, we need someone to take control of the situation, when we discover a worrying lump, we seek the calm reassurance of the GP or consultant. In so much of life, we need to listen to the calm voice of reason.

In all of the kerfuffle posed by this week's moral dilemma, I came to the realisation, as if for the first time, that I am a third-generation immigrant. It's not an issue for me, or others, though things might be different if I wasn't white. The DNA of the families who have lived all of their lives in Northumberland, displays heavy evidence of Syrian DNA - based in large on the Roman Empire who used Syrian slaves for the construction of Hadrian's Wall. We all have more in common than we care to remember, or be reminded of. Now he is God, not of the dead, but of the living, for in him all people are in fact alive.

The last words this week, must go to St Paul in today's second reading. Finally, brothers and sisters, pray that we might be preserved from the interference of bigoted and evil people.
